

Spring and summer bring outdoor fun

but also the risk of tick bites

We are seeking people with Lyme disease. Symptoms usually include a red, round or oval rash that gradually expands. Facial palsy, meningitis, heart block, or arthritis may be complications caused by Lyme disease.

For more information about research studies at the NIH Bethesda campus, please call:

1-800-411-1222

or email LymeDxStudies@niaid.nih.gov

